Our Man in the Field

<https://omitf.com>

"I think of Our Man In The Field as kind of a character and not really even me," says Ellis. "Something like a Jack Kerouac or an Albert Camus. A writer and a correspondent, a roving reporter but more like a TV version in the '70s; Hunter S Thompson but less guns and LSD. Mostly, I don't want the listener to think about the songs as being mine or about me, it's more about the story and the characters in there. They're always about real people and hopefully that makes them relatable."
